Rainwater Collection System at IPT Sustainable Station

One of the distinguished features of IPT Sustainable Station in Amchit is the rainwater collection system. The rainwater is collected from the gas station canopy and roof and is stored in an underground collection tank. It is then treated through a 5 stage water treatment system which includes screening of water as it enters the water treatment plant, coagulation of dirt particles, sedimentation to settle heavy dirt, filtration to filter out remaining particles, and finally disinfection to kill any remaining bacteria in the water and supply the station with fresh soft RO water.
